POLICY STATEMENT

- I. Based upon our criteria and assessment of the peer-reviewed literature, the use of active or passive cryotherapy devices has not been medically proven to be effective and, therefore, is considered not medically necessary for any indication.

DESCRIPTION

Cryotherapy or “cold therapy” refers to the placement of cold packs or compresses to promote comfort while helping to prevent inflammation and swelling. The devices can provide either passive or active cooling. Passive cooling devices are usually garments such as vests or cuffs, in which ice water can be circulated and compression controlled by the use of a hand pump, or which use gravity. Some types of passive cooling devices can be fitted with a mechanical pump, which allows the temperature of the circulating water to be maintained at a more constant temperature (e.g., Cryo/Cuff). Active cooling devices have separate pumps that combine focal compression with cold to provide optimal control of swelling, edema, hematoma, hemarthrosis, and pain (e.g., Game Ready).

RATIONALE

The majority of the published randomized studies of cooling devices failed to adequately describe the cooling regimens or include the relevant control group of standard ice pack treatment. When cooling devices and ice packs were used with the same regimen, no differences in health outcomes were observed. Currently the available evidence is insufficient to determine whether continuous cooling with these devices results in improved health outcomes when compared to usual ice pack exchange in the home environment. As the available scientific literature is insufficient to document that the use of passive cooling systems is associated with a benefit beyond convenience; these devices are considered not medically necessary.

CODES

- Eligibility for reimbursement is based upon the benefits set forth in the member’s subscriber contract.
- CODES MAY NOT BE COVERED UNDER ALL CIRCUMSTANCES. PLEASE READ THE POLICY AND GUIDELINES STATEMENTS CAREFULLY.
- Codes may not be all inclusive as the AMA and CMS code updates may occur more frequently than policy updates.
- Code Key: Experimental/Investigational = (E/I), Not medically necessary/ appropriate = (NMN).
